A practical, safeguarded route from learning to work.

DASKEREL is a digital learning-to-work platform that helps learners and jobseekers build skills, understand career options and connect learning with real opportunities. This pack explains how an employer or institution can explore a proportionate, responsible relationship with us.

What partners can contribute

- Real-world insight, workplace challenges or guest input.
- Clearly described opportunities, placements or entry routes.
- Feedback on relevant skills, accessibility and learner readiness.

What DASKEREL contributes

- Learning and career guidance that makes routes visible.
- Structured candidate and opportunity information, subject to consent.
- A discussion-led approach that can be tailored to local priorities.

Ways to begin

- An exploratory conversation to identify a shared problem.
- A time-limited co-design or pilot proposal with measurable outcomes.
- A scoped project, placement or employer insight activity.

Built-in boundaries

- No claims of partnership, endorsement or integration without written agreement.
- No sharing of personal data without a lawful basis, clear purpose and suitable controls.
- Roles, safeguarding, supervision, costs and success measures agreed before delivery.

Safeguards before scale

A partnership should be useful to learners and workable for partners. We therefore agree governance, safeguarding, accessibility, data protection, referral boundaries and evaluation before launching any activity.

Start an exploratory conversation

Tell us about the talent, skills, inclusion or workforce challenge you want to address. We will respond with an honest view of where DASKEREL could help and what would need to be agreed before work begins.
